PROFILE

The Institute for Competitiveness (I-Com) is a think tank founded in 2005 by a group of scholars, professionals and managers, with offices in Rome and Brussels. The objective of I-Com is the promotion of debates and analyses on competitiveness intended for innovation, in the context of the Italian, European and international politico-economic landscape. The main areas of interest of I-Com are: digital, energy, innovation, health and institutions. On 2017 I-Com joined the Global Trade and Innovation Policy Alliance, a worldwide network of 25 independent think tanks from five different continents, each active in the fields of innovation and international trade. The president of I-Com is the economist Stefano da Empoli.
